Course aims and target groups

The MA in Syriac Theology offers academic training for theologians belonging to Syriac Christianity. It also offers scholarly specialization for graduates of arts/humanities, such as of theology, history, Oriental studies and archaeology.

Studying the Syriac tradition enriches our understanding of the past as well as our ability to respond to current challenges and contribute to today's society on an academic, spiritual or pastoral level.

MA students:

- Receive an academic training in Syriac language, history and theology
- Develop a cultural and religious understanding of Syriac Christianity
- Learn skills to apply theological knowledge both professionally and in everyday life amidst the cultural and religious diversity of a globalising environment
- Will be equipped to work in the areas of religious education, catechesis and pastoral work
- Gain skills and knowledge in ecumenical and interreligious dialogue

Why Salzburg? What Salzburg offers...

- Study in a beautiful UNESCO world heritage city in the centre of Europe
- Live in centrally located accommodation with spiritual and community life
